

Prisoner of war camp (1940-1945)

In 1994 Paul Ricoeur was questioned by two researchers about the reason why his bibliography didn't mention a couple of texts published in 1941, under his name, in a journal clearly labeled as "Pétainiste", L'Unité Française. He thought fit, at that time, to write this "note on certain words of prisoners" and, without publishing it, left it available at the French Institut d'Histoire du Temps Présent to anyone who wanted to get further into this issue. We think fit, in our turn, to make it available in an English translation to a greater number.

– Prisoner of war camp (1940-1945)

« Note sur certaines paroles de prisonniers » (1994).

English translation by Charles Reagan.

In 1994 Paul Ricoeur was questioned by two researchers about the reason why his bibliography didn't mention a couple of texts published in 1941, under his name, in a journal clearly labeled as "Pétainiste", L'Unité Française. He thought fit, at that time, to write this "note on certain words of prisoners" and, without publishing it, left it available at the French Institut d'Histoire du Temps Présent to anyone who wanted to get further into this issue. We think fit, in our turn, to make it available in an English translation to a greater number.